Commercial Property Management In New York City John Wiley & Sons

In order to realize the maximum value of an investment property, effective property management is crucial to all owners. While most owners rely on agency or in-house property managers to take care of their properties, some will personally manage their own. Regardless, professional knowledge is required to attain maximum revenue with minimum costs and ensure that the property value is not placed in jeopardy. This book is a practical guide that helps property managers, employees, and owners manage their residential rental buildings effectively and professionally, emphasizing the balance between responsibility and service to the owners and tenants.

This essay sheds light on why rental properties are the worst type of real estate investment and also elucidates why storage facilities are the best type of real estate investment. Moreover, how to make money so that you can afford to invest in buying real estate is delineated in this essay. In spite of their touted merits, rental properties are arguably the utmost worst type of real estate investment for a multitude of reasons. To the dismay of the investor, buying rental properties, such as single family homes, entails succumbing to an exorbitant amount of debt financing which does not always culminate in generating positive cash flows, especially if the tenants renege on their lease agreements and desist from paying their monthly rent. At the end of the day, the property owner is responsible for paying property taxes, home owners association fees, homeowners insurance fees, continual home maintenance costs, and even other unexpected costs. The risks of owning rental properties over other types of real estate can be substantial, especially when you are dependent upon potentially irresponsible tenants to pay your mortgages for these rental properties. Irresponsible tenants can be eminently difficult to evict from your rental properties, even if they continuously shirk their responsibility of honoring lease agreement by desisting from paying their monthly rent. Moreover, as a property owner, you may have to pay exorbitant fees out of pocket to undergo the costly eviction process which can take months to finalize. Some investors would not even consider procuring rental properties since the massive risks can easily outweigh the upsides, especially when the the investor feels as though the tenants have more rights than the landlords. Additionally, ample investors are reticent about hiring an expensive property management company to deal with their property issues. Investors that cannot actively manage nor maintain their properties due to living far away from their properties may need to rely upon expensive property management companies to collect rent from tenants and perform maintenance repairs. Buying rental properties is perhaps the utmost worst type of real estate investment. Starting a rental property business requires enormous start-up costs. Moreover, the costs to remodel the rental properties so that they are suitable for tenants and in compliance with landlord-tenant regulations and laws can also be exorbitant. "Any damage to the foundation, plumbing, or wiring can cost thousands of dollars to repair. But even if you buy a property in good condition, you may still have to make changes to get it up to code. This is because many states have strict requirements for rental properties that will need to be met before you can start renting" (Colley, n.d.). Rendering rental properties up to code can easily cost thousands upon thousands of dollars. Additionally, unexpected property maintenance repairs can add up to thousands upon thousands of dollars overtime and render the investment of owning rental properties far less profitable than presumed. "Landlord and tenant laws require that you make serious repairs quickly. If you do not then you could be held liable for additional damages" (Colley, n.d.). If you are not contracted with a property management company then the costs to make emergency repairs can be almost cost prohibitive on the landlord's end. Another salient issue associated with becoming a rental property owner goes beyond having tenants who completely abstain from paying their monthly rent. Having to deal with the costly and time consuming eviction process is an onerous burden that can render rental property ownership all the more of a hefty net loss on the investor's end. Additionally, much to the landlord's dismay, tenants can potentially taint the walls with "graffiti, pour concrete in the toilets and sink, allow mold to fester in the appliances, and also make stains on the floors" (Colley, n.d.). Manage Properties with QuickBooks Createspace Independent Publishing Platform

This dissertation, "To Evaluate the Contribution of Owner Committee to the Quality of Housing Management in the Private Residential Property in Hong Kong" by Ka-wan, Wu, 伍家文, was obtained from The University of Hong Kong (Pokfulam, Hong Kong) and is being sold pursuant to Creative Commons: Attribution 3.0 Hong Kong License. The content of this dissertation has not been altered in any way. We have altered the formatting in order to facilitate the ease of printing and reading of the dissertation. All rights not granted by the above license are retained by the author. Abstract: The property management in Hong Kong has emerged in its importance in the past decades. The people's thought towards property management has changed from the provision of basic services such as watchmen and cleaners to a professional servicing industry. Moreover, as changes in people's attitude in service consumption and social values, the requirement of the owners for the property management services raised. Apart from this, the participation of Owner Committee (OC) in the property management has become more significant which has been recognized by the residents, the property management practitioners as well as the government. As a result of the rapid population growth, the demand for the housing has increased rapidly too thus, led to the development of multi-storey buildings in large scale. The government policy has encouraged the participation of OC in the management of the building by formation of Owners Incorporations aiming at the promotion of a 'self-help' approach for which the OC could manage the building on their own. The encouragement of the government by enactment of the Building Management Ordinance has strengthened the power of the Incorporated Owners as they have the power to terminate and to appoint managers at their choice. However, we always hear that Owner Committee (OC) will cause a lot of quarrels between OC and the property managers/property management companies and bring a lot of troubles to the property manager/property management company. Sometimes the property managers/ property management companies complained that the requirement of the OC is too high to meet and unreasonable. Moreover, they also complained that OC controls too much on them so that their efficiency of work and their daily performance will be reduced. In addition, it creates a great impact to the property management companies and to the industry of property management.

For example, the incidents of termination of property managers/property management companies were increased for the past decade. Does OC really could not perform their function and to make contribution to improve the quality of private residential property in Hong Kong? In this dissertation, it is to find out whether the OC participation in the management of the property has positive impacts on the management quality of the estates or not. If yes, to what extent or level that OC could help improve the quality of the private residential property in Hong Kong. After the estate study, it was found that OC participation in the management of the property could help the management company understand their needs and become more accountable. It was also noted that by the questionnaire survey and face to face interviews, the estate selected for the estate study that is a high level of participation of OC, all the comments and results have a higher satisfaction rate and a positive impacts on the management quality of the estate as well as in the whole property management industry. DOI: 10.5353/th_b5372737
