Written and photographed by Pffaftown, NC native and Winston-Salem Journal veteran Scott Dickson, In Search of Mayberry is a fascinating look into some of North Carolina's most celebrated and loved small towns. If you are an Andy Griffith Show fan you are sure to enjoy this material. Dickson focuses on small town values and beliefs and guides the reader through 12 towns and villages centering his pictures and descriptions on the town and its history. Featured in Mount Airy is tourism such as Snappy Lunch, Floyd's Barber Shop, the Visitor's Center and Mayberry landmarks, shopping including Spec.

This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1874 edition. Excerpt: "...zone. Apples, pears, peaches, plums, apricots, and small fruits of all sorts, grow well in nearly all parts of the State. The only general exception, as to profitable yield, is the plum, which is destroyed by the curculio, as elsewhere. In a few localities in the upper part of "the valley," frost is mentioned as an occasional drawback in peach cultivation. Pears are generally of vigorous growth and productive habit. "But a small part of the Cotton Belt is found in Virginia. A few counties in the south-eastern corner, south of the James River, and along the North Carolina line, embrace all the available cotton lands in the State.... As compared with last year, the breadth seeded is nearly double, but as compared with the year before the war, it is not one-half. The want of means, both for paying hands and supporting the working force of the plantation in food and forage, has been the great drawback. "Tobacco is the great commercial staple of the State.... The price of the product makes it profitable to cultivate.... Its successful cultivation is practically better understood than in any other State, except perhaps Kentucky, and there the Virginia method is more or less followed." The following interesting facts are stated in a letter addressed by Mr. Imboden, to F. B. Goddard, Esq.: --"The Prices or Farms in Virginia range from $5 per acre up to $150. The high priced lands being in the celebrated Shenandoah Valley. The region of this State best suited to European emigrants' wants, is the country lying on the south side of James River, extending from this city to the Atlantic coast, and thence westward along the northern boundary of North Carolina to the Tennessee line. There is room in this part of the State for...

In Search of Mayberry Insiders' Guide Southern Homes and Plan Books showcases the architectural legacy and design philosophy of Leila Ross Wilburn (1885–1967), a legacy that includes hundreds of houses in a variety of popular house styles, from bungalows to ranch houses, built using Wilburn's plan books during the first six decades of the twentieth century. Wilburn opened her own firm in Atlanta in 1908 and practiced until her death in 1967. She published nine plan books that offered mail order house designs to contractors, builders, and prospective homeowners and allowed them the ease of choosing a preconceived design and construction plan. Sarah J. Boykin and Susan M. Hunter provide a survey of the southern homes built from Wilburn's plan books, examining Wilburn's architectural legacy and her achievements as a plan book architect. The book provides beautiful photographs of houses built from her plans, along with illustrations from the plan books themselves and other related documents from the time. Readers can thus see how her designs were realized as individual houses and also how they influenced the development of some of the Atlanta area's beloved historical neighborhoods, most notably Druid Hills, Morningside, Virginia-Highland, and Candler Park, as well as the McDonough–Adams–Kings Highway (MAK) Historic District in Decatur. Today, Wilburn's houses are enjoyed as appealing, historic homes and represent some of the richest examples of southern vernacular architecture to emerge from the plan book tradition.
