Every year millions of students and* families sit around their kitchen tables and grapple with how they are going to pay for college. All too often they approach what may be the most important financial decision of their lives armed with incomplete, confusing, or inaccurate information about their options. College financial aid offices have a unique opportunity--and responsibility--to help students and families make informed and careful decisions about both how, and how much, to borrow. This report attempts to shed light on ways that colleges can help students and their families avoid unnecessarily risky and costly debt. To learn about current college practices, the author and his colleagues interviewed financial aid administrators at 22 varied colleges around the country and examined financial aid award letters from several additional colleges. Currently, most private student lenders require colleges to confirm basic information about the student's enrollment and costs before the lender will issue a private loan. This "school certification" process gives colleges a powerful opportunity to help students make sound borrowing decisions.

They focused primarily on college practices related to school certification, and in the process identified some additional notable practices. In short, they learned that a college's actions and involvement at crucial decision points in the borrowing process can have an enormous impact on whether students and their families make sound and informed choices about private student loans. Their findings clearly demonstrate that colleges of various types, sizes and locations have taken meaningful steps to provide prospective private student loan borrowers with timely information about their options, and that such efforts can help reduce unnecessarily risky borrowing. Appended are: (1) U.S. Department of Education "Self-Certification" Form; (2) Alternative Loan Processing Certification Form, Loyola University of New Orleans; (3) San Diego State University Alternative Loan Procedures; and (4) San Diego State University Alternative Loan Counseling. (Contains 62 footnotes.) [This paper was written with contributions from Lauren Asher, Seth Frotman, and Debbie Cochrane. Funding for this paper was provided by the FINRA Investor Education

A practical guide to all key the elements of pharmaceuticals and biotech manufacturing and design Engineers working in the pharmaceutical and biotech industries are routinely called upon to handle operational issues outside of their fields of expertise. Traditionally the competencies required to fulfill those tasks were achieved piecemeal, through years of self-teaching and on-the-job experience—until now. Practical Pharmaceutical Engineering provides readers with the technical information and tools needed to deal with most common engineering issues that can arise in the course of day-to-day operations of pharmaceutical/biotech research and manufacturing. Engineers working in pharma/biotech wear many hats. They are involved in the conception, design, construction, and operation of research facilities and manufacturing plants, as well as the scale-up, manufacturing, packaging, and labeling processes. They have to implement FDA regulations, validation assurance, quality control, and Good Manufacturing Practices (GMP) compliance measures, and to maintain a high level of personal and environmental safety. This book provides readers from a range of engineering specialties with a detailed blueprint and the technical knowledge needed to tackle those critical responsibilities with confidence. At minimum, after reading this book, readers will have the knowledge needed to constructively participate in contractor/user briefings. Provides pharmaceutical industry professionals with an overview of how all the parts fit together and a level of expertise that can take years of on-the-job experience to acquire. Addresses topics not covered in university courses but which are crucial to working effectively in the pharma/biotech industry. Fills a gap in the literature, providing important information on pharmaceutical operation issues required for meeting regulatory guidelines, plant support design, and project engineering. Covers the basics of HVAC systems, water systems, electric systems, reliability, maintainability, and quality assurance, relevant to pharmaceutical engineering. Practical Pharmaceutical Engineering is an indispensable "tool of the trade" for chemical engineers, mechanical engineers, and pharmaceutical engineers employed by pharmaceutical and biotech companies, engineering firms, and consulting firms. It also is a must-read for engineering students, pharmacy students, chemistry students, and others considering a career in pharmaceuticals. Model Rules of Professional Conduct Catalog of Federal Domestic As A single-volume text that distills information for students. Based on the sixth edition of Kaplin and Lee's indispensable guide to the law that bears on the conduct of higher education, The Law of Higher Education, Sixth Edition: Student Version provides an up-to-date reference and guide for coursework in higher education law and programs preparing law students and higher education administrators for leadership roles. This student edition discusses the most significant areas of the law for college and university attorneys and administrators. Each chapter is introduced by a discussion of key terms and topics the students will encounter, and the book includes materials from the full sixth edition that are most relevant to student interests and classroom instruction. It also contains a "crosswalk" that keys sections of the Student Edition to counterpart sections of the two-volume treatise. Complements the full version. Includes a glossary of legal terms and an appendix on how to read legal material for students without legal training. Discusses key terms in each chapter. Concentrates on key topics students will need to know. This is fundamental reading for law students preparing for careers in higher education law and for graduate students in higher education administration programs.
