The term Telehealth covers a wide spectrum of disciplines, ranging from the enabling of direct clinical interventions to patient-centered care needs such as personal monitoring and care team support, as well as education, policy and professional aspects. Contributing to the solving of healthcare sustainability challenges and supporting the development and delivery of a wide range of innovative care and treatment models, Telehealth also acts as a major driver for change in global health issues. This book, Transforming Healthcare Through Innovation in Digital Health, presents the accepted full-paper, double-blinded, peer-reviewed contributions, as well as the editor-reviewed invited keynote papers, delivered at the 7th International Conference on Global Telehealth (GT2018), held in Colombo, Sri Lanka, on 10 and 11 October 2018. Approximately 50% of the total initial submissions were accepted. The conference provided a platform for the sharing of best practice and research directions across the international Telehealth community, and the 14 papers presented here deal with a variety of themes ranging from data collection and analysis to the design of interventions and delivery mechanisms, in situations from public health and primary care through to consumer health informatics, and from implementation and algorithm design to privacy and ethical considerations. Offering an overview of the innovation and diversity of today's Telehealth domain, this book will be of interest to all those involved in the design and implementation of healthcare solutions.

The Effectiveness of Drug Abuse

Treatment Jones & Bartlett Publishers

The purpose of this study was to answer two questions: 1) Is case management cost effective from the perspective of the employer? and 2) What variables will explain the net savings realized by the employer? Findings may be useful in changing the selection criteria to identify possible cases for management. Case management is cost effective for the employer. In this study for every $1.08 spent on case management services, $4.83 was saved based upon the projected savings in medical expenses. This return is accomplished with 70% of the cases resulting in negative net savings. This indicates that more stringent selection criteria should be used in identifying cases for management. Case management is a process used by employers to oversee and coordinate the medical care received by patients. The purpose is to provide a tailored plan of care for the patient that will reduce time and minimize the cost of care. Case management is a process of planning, communicating, and coordinating the appropriate resources necessary to respond to the health care needs of the individual. The process brings together the right people, in the right place, at the right time, to provide the right services to the patient.
