The world of veterinary medicine is changing. People are realizing that if alternative medicine is better for them, it's better for their pets, too. Dogs are visiting acupuncturists, chiropractic doctors, and homeopaths. Still, many dog owners are unaware that such simple measures as changing their pet's diet and using vitamins, herbs, and other natural cures can help prevent or heal ailments ranging from excessive scratching to depression to a host of serious diseases. The Veterinarians' Guide to Natural Remedies for Dogs is both an introduction and a guide to the vast world of natural healing methods, treatments, and foods now available for dogs. Author Martin Zucker offers advice from dozens of holistic practitioners and licensed veterinarians, who share their recipes, insights, and "prescriptions." Here dog owners will find information on everything from nutritional supplements to massage therapy, as well as how these treatments can be used alone or in conjunction with traditional medications and surgical techniques.

Research on human athletes is changing what we know about stretching. For example, it is now recognized that aggressive stretching should only take place after muscles are warmed up and shortened from exertion. Authors Sasha and Ashley Foster have applied this latest research to dogs many of whom compete in vigorous canine sporting events so that you can learn how to safely and effectively stretch your dog to prevent injuries, maintain joint integrity, and improve you dog's fitness whether he is an elite canine athlete or a lap dog. Over 300 photos and diagrams demonstrate how to safely and effectively stretch each major muscle group in great detail. Special emphasis is given on correct hand placement for joint stabilization and how to maintain straight plane movement. Stretching routines are presented for both large and small dogs, older dogs, and those that are involved in a variety of dog sports.

*Howell Book House
 Massage for the Senior Dog describes senior dogs, their needs at their mature stage of life, instruction for how to address those needs with the skills of massage therapy. This book describes the psychosocial needs of dogs, dogs pack mentality, canine body language, and instinctual behaviors. It describes a style of safe animal handling during the massage which is based on awareness and use of universal animal body language and self-awareness techniques. Practitioner body mechanics are more than moving in a balanced and grounded way; all movements are directed by breath, intentionality and ownership of space. Included in this book are massage skills, body mechanics, animal communication, the aging cycle, specific requirements of geriatric dogs, and a full massage sequence. The instruction is based on the authors 30 years of canine massage experience as a practitioner and instructor at the PetMassage Training and Research

Institute in Toledo Ohio. Massage for the Senior Dog is the text for the PetMassage Home-study course, Senior Dog Massage for the Canine Massage Practitioner. Find the link when you visit:
