Excerpt from Proceedings of the Annual Meeting of the New Jersey State Horticultural Society, 1897: At Its Twenty-Second Annual Session, Held at Trenton, N. J., January 6th and 7th, 1897 The duty of bidding you welcome in the name of the Mercer County Board of Agriculture is a pleasant one. It is made so by recollections of the past, when your visit, coming like an oasis in the winter desert, abounded in fruits and flowers. It is also made pleasant by what we expect from you on this occasion. The branches of industry and knowledge, you are striving to advance, are closely connected with the enjoyment and health of the great multitude of our own people and those of other lands. Products of your raising are needed alike in the homes of the poor and rich.

Let's face it, planning and saving for retirement is not easy. We are told that the earlier we start the better and that the "magic of compounding" will make our dreams come true if we simply trust the stock market and our investment advisor. But for most people it's simply not possible. People in their twenties are often saddled with student debt and may be struggling to find suitable full-time employment. Saving for retirement is the last thing on their minds, as it should be. Then in our thirties and forties we tend to do things like get married, have kids, and buy houses. All these things cost a lot of money! So for many people there simply isn't any money left to put away for retirement. Therefore many of us become procrastinators when it comes to saving for retirement. But there is hope. This book will take you step-by-step through planning and saving for retirement starting in your fifties and the best way to fund your retirement years. It is designed for people approaching retirement who want to ensure it is comfortable and stress-free.

 Excerpt from The British Academy First Annual Shakespeare Lecture: What to Expect of Shakespeare If the Golden Age has not quite returned up to now, the cause is perhaps that the experiment has not yet been continued long enough. May it be long continued! The theme assigned me by you is one which not even the boldest minds, the best informed, the most accessible to poetical beauty, dare approach without awe. Encouragement may, however, be taken from no less ardent a worshipper of the Shakespearian fame than Swinburne. 'For two hundred years at least, ' did he write, 'have students of every kind put forth in every sort of boat, on a longer or a shorter voyage of research across the waters of that unsounded sea (the works of Shakespeare). From the paltriest fishing craft to such majestic galleys as were steered by Coleridge and by Goethe, each division of the fleet has done or has essayed its turn of work.' For an occasion like the present no galley could be too great or too majestic. If it pleased you to select the merest fishing craft, the reason must be that, to come to you, it had to cross the ocean, and this doubtless humoured the fancy of a sporting nation. As soon, however, as your invitation reached me, I accepted it, thinking that the best courtesy was not to discuss but to obey, and considering that, for lack of better motives, my coining from the lands further away than 'vexed Bermoothes' was an homage I could offer which was not within the reach of many of my betters. I When Ronsard died at St. Cosme, near Tours, in December, 1585, Shakespeare being then twenty-one, all France went into mourning; besides the ceremonies at St. Cosme, solemn obsequies were celebrated at Paris, orations were delivered in French and in Latin by Cardinal Duperron and others; the crowd was such that princes and magnates had to be denied admission for lack of space; not one poet of note failed to express his sorrow for the national loss; these elegies were collected under the title of Le Tombeau de Ronsard. My Little Pony 2013 Annual DC

Excerpt from Forty-Second Annual Report of the Secretary of the State Horticultural Society of Michigan for the Year 1912 The year That has gone by has been one where many of us have met our "Waterloo" and I feel sometimes as though in many respects we have been a failure in another way. Personally I feel that way, and especially as by my advice a good many in years past have been induced to go into the apple business and today they are plying me with questions and advice as to how they can get out of the orchard business what they were to believe was in it but which they have been unable to secure. This past year they have raised their apples; they have got fruit but there are no buyers in the field, and they do not know what to do with their products. This is not the condition that is peculiar to our own state alone, it is general. Orchardists of other states have met with the same difficult I cannot believe that the comparatively few hundreds of people who have been induced to go into this business have been able to raise so much fruit that there is such an enormous over-production as to cause the present low price. Especially do I think so when there are right here in our own country ninety-five million of people to eat it for nine months of the year. The whole trouble I believe is that there is something wrong in the marketing. If we can do anything to help that end of the problem it is the thing we must do. We must try to get at the bottom of this matter and inaugurate some plans or methods by which our fruits can be marketed and we receive something like a price commensurate with the costs of production. This will probably all come out later in the discussion and now without any further words go on and take up the first thing on the program. Before we take up the regular program, the first topic for consideration is: "How Best to Feed the Apple Orchard," by Mr. Luther E. Hall, of Ionia, who will address you. How Best To Feed The Apple Orchard. Luther E. Hall, Ionia. Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen - When your Secretary asked me to prepare something on this topic, he intimated that he would like to have it very brief and to the point. Now the topic of feeding the apple orchard may be made very brief, and I will try to be brief, but I hope I may be able to contribute a few hints that may help in feeding the apple orchard so as to get it to a condition of productiveness. In the first place I want to describe the conditions under which we are working, and then you will better understand our methods. D. 1858 The very short time (a little over two weeks) which has elapsed since my acceptance of the post to which I have been invited by the Board of Trust of Knox college, and my continued duties as a Pastor meantime, may be some apology for me, if the thoughts suggested on this occasion should be deemed common place, and if the form and arrangement of them be somewhat like other extemporaneous productions, unstudied and ill digested.
