Business Plan For Starting A Daycare Simon and Schuster
 This guide describes elements needed to enhance public and private sector involvement in child care. An introductory section defines the problem and outlines the elements of a comprehensive child care policy. Section II presents a policy matrix that serves as a guide to typical problems and solutions in the process of instituting employer-supported child care. Section III describes benefits to businesses which offer child care services. The section identifies obstacles small business employers face and offers strategies for the implementation of child care programs. Section IV reviews employer initiatives, including direct service programs, financial assistance to employees, information and referral programs, and alternative workplace policies. Section V looks at the first level of public-private partnerships: state policies that encourage private sector involvement. Section VI previews the Child Care Action Campaign's report on public-private partnerships, and Section VII provides additional examples of public-private initiatives. Section

VIII reports on two case studies on comprehensive approaches to service delivery in Maine and Seattle, Washington. Section IX focuses on economic development strategies designed to increase the availability of child care resources. State efforts to support employer-supported programs and public-private initiatives are explored in Section X. Finally, Section XI provides a bibliography and a list of resources, materials, and organizations with expertise on particular issues. (RH)

This new book details the major decisions and steps involved in starting a daycare. Opening a daycare requires making numerous decisions about types of daycare, location, staff and children. The information within this book will help guide you through those decisions. The learning curve for starting a daycare is steep and there are so many things to learn. By reading this book, however, you should be confident that you are well on your way towards opening your very own daycare.

Improving the Quality of Child Care Harper Collins

Based on the premise that good child care jobs are the cornerstone of high-quality services for children and families, this booklet details workplace standards for family child care providers. The booklet is designed to be used for educating family child care providers, evaluating individual family child care programs, setting goals and measuring success, and enlisting the wider community in advocating for the resources that family child care providers need. Following an introduction describing the development of the model work standards and how they may be used, the booklet is divided into five parts. Part 1 describes the elements of a model contract or parent-provider agreement, and program policies that affect the quality of the provider's work environment. Part 2 addresses the professional development needs of providers. Part 3 looks at the home as a work environment, and sets criteria for assessing quality from the perspective of a provider's needs. Part 4 applies to providers who employ co-teachers, assistants, or other helpers. Part 5 features the importance of community support for creating better child care jobs. Seven appendices include worksheets and information on the legal impact of antitrust laws and family child care accreditation. (Contains 13 references.) (KB)

This business book is different. Unlike every other book you'll read with titles like "How To Craft The Perfect Business Plan in 89 Incredibly Simple Steps", this book is different. It's a simple "How To" guide for creating a Business Plan that's right for you and your business and also an easy to follow workbook. The workbook will guide you through the process you need to follow. It tells you the questions that you need to consider, the numbers you need (and how to get them), and supporting documents you need to gather. The main purpose of a business plan is to aid YOU in running YOUR business. So the workbook has been designed for you to write the information in and refer back to as needed. If you need to supply your Business Plan to another party, such as a bank if you're looking for finance, then it's simple to type up the various sections for a professional document. Running your own business is both a challenging and daunting prospect. With a well-thought-out business plan in place (anticipating the challenges you'll face AND the solutions) it will be much less daunting and much more exciting. Good luck! Molly

I would have climbed up a mountain to get on the list [to serve overseas]. We were going to do our duty. Despite all the bad things that happened, America was our home. This is where I was born. It was where my mother and father were. There was a feeling of wanting to do your part. --Gladys Carter, member of the 6888th To Serve My Country, to Serve my Race is the story of the historic 6888th, the first United States Women's Army Corps unit composed of African-American women to serve overseas. While African-American men and white women were invited, if belatedly, to serve their country abroad, African-American women were excluded for overseas duty throughout most of WWII. Under political pressure from legislators like Adam Clayton Powell, Jr., the NAACP, the black press, and even President Roosevelt, the U.S. War Department was forced to deploy African-American women to the European theater in 1945. African-American women, having succeeded, through their own activism and political ties, in their quest to shape their own lives, answered the call from all over the country, from every socioeconomic stratum. Stationed in France and England at the end of World War II, the 6888th brought together women like Mary Daniel Williams, a cook in the 6888th who signed up for the Army to escape the slums of Cleveland and to improve her ninth-grade education, and Margaret Barnes Jones, a public relations officer of the 6888th, who grew up in a comfortable household with a politically active mother who encouraged her to challenge the system. Despite the social, political, and economic restrictions imposed upon these African-American women in their own country, they were eager to serve, not only out of patriotism but out of a desire to uplift their race and dispell bigoted preconceptions about their abilities. Elaine Bennett, a First Sergeant in the 6888th, joined because "I wanted to prove to myself and maybe to the world that we would give what we had back to the United States as a confirmation that we were full-fledged citizens." Filled with compelling personal testimony based on extensive interviews, To Serve My Country is the first book to document the lives of these courageous pioneers. It reveals how their Army experience affected them for the rest of their lives and how they, in turn, transformed the U.S. military forever.

Seminar paper from the year 2015 in the subject Pedagogy - Nursery Pedagogy, Early Childhood Education, grade: 1,0, Alice Salomon University of Applied Sciences Berlin AS, language: English, abstract: This paper contains the most important information about a mission statement in day care centers and a personal statement on the two questions "Does it make sense if the mission statement is already given by the responsible body?" and "What speaks for or against an external consultant in the creation of a mission statement?". At the beginning, an illustration is presented in which the different forms of daycare center work are described and the term mission statement is classified. This is followed by an explanation of the term "mission statement" in relation to daycare centers and a presentation of the framework conditions for creating one and the benefits of doing so. This is followed by the presentation of two methods for creating a mission statement, with which it is possible to work out and visualize the values of a team. These are exemplarily the water lily model and the value profile according to Steven Reiss. This is followed by the process of creating a mission statement. Here, general information is given on how to carry it out, structuring aids for formulating it, and methodological suggestions on how to implement the mission statement. The last chapter deals with the question "Does it make sense if the mission statement is already given by the executing agency?" and the question "What speaks for or against an external consultant in the creation of a mission statement?" Both questions are considered independently of each other and a separate conclusion has been drawn for each question.

In a childcare center, instructors concentrate on the physical and emotional wellbeing of their children. In order to provide a deeper understanding of the pupil, teachers in the centers must incorporate a connection with their students that benefits their interests and needs, while at the same time moving them towards a higher collection of principles. This kind of teaching with a loving connection would enhance the spiritual and incidental learning of the pupil. I have learned how to open and operate a quality 5 star rated center with little start up money and minimum resources.
