Elizabeth I St. Martin's Griffin
Gary Soto writes that when he was five "what I knew best was at ground level." In this lively collection of short essays, Soto takes his reader to a ground-level perspective, resreating in vivid detail the sights, sounds, smells, and textures he knew growing up in his Fresno, California, neighborhood. The "things" of his boyhood tie it all together: his Buddha "splotched with gold," the taps of his shoes and the "engines of sparks that lived beneath my soles," his worn tennies smelling of "summer grass, asphalt, the moist sock breathing the defeat of basesall." The child's world is made up of small things--small, very important things.

In Mystics, William Harmless, S.J., introduces readers to the scholarly study of mysticism. He explores both mystics' extraordinary lives and their no-less-extraordinary writings using a unique case-study method centered on detailed examinations of six major Christian mystics: Thomas Merton, Bernard of Clairvaux, Hildegard of Bingen, Bonaventure, Meister Eckhart, and Evagrius Ponticus. Rather than presenting mysticism as a subtle web of psychological or theological abstractions, Harmless's case-study approach brings things down to earth, restoring mystics to their historical context.

"A Study in Love" is a captivating and thought-provoking collection of poems that delve into the intricacies of love and relationships. Each poem is accompanied by a unique abstract artwork, visually exploring the themes and emotions of the written work. Through the use of figurative language and evocative imagery, the poems explore the multifaceted nature of love and the ways in which it can shape our lives. From the excitement of a new connection, to the depth of a long-standing relationship, "A Study in Love" offers a kaleidoscope of perspectives and experiences, creating a rich tapestry of emotion and insight. Whether you're a seasoned poetry reader or simply looking for a fresh take on the timeless theme of love, this collection is a must-read for anyone seeking to deepen their understanding and appreciation of this complex and enduring emotion.

In his masterful debut collection, Imagine Morning, Eric Forsbergh offers wisdom in poems that are insightful, lyrical, and compassionate. Inquisitive, he observes an array of subjects from a lonely widower to "the speckless gold" of a model's body as he seeks to uncover the intricacies of humankind in poems that contemplate the time-honored themes of companionship and solitude. Here is an author who masters both free and formal verse while revealing a skillful handling of figurative language and sound devices. Here is a poet who ultimately reminds us to pay attention to even the smallest details in life, to refrain from dwelling on the past and instead "sway forward" like an inchworm, "stretch and touch,/ let go what's behind." Carolyn Kreiter-Foronda Virginia Poet Laureate Emerita, 2006-2008

An Introduction to Shakespeare's Poems provides a lively and informed examination of Shakespeare's non-dramatic poetry: the narrative poems Venus and Adonis and The Rape of Lucrece; the Sonnets; and various minor poems, including some only recently attributed to Shakespeare. Peter Hyland locates Shakespeare as a sceptical voice within the turbulent social context in which Elizabethan professional poets had to work, and relates his poems to the tastes, values and political pressures of his time. Hyland also explores how

Shakespeare's poetry can be of interest to twenty-first century readers. Figurative Language in 'The Rudy Elmenhurst Story' Tilbury House Publishers and Cadent Publishing Arabic and Hebrew Love Poems in al-Andalus investigates a largely overlooked subset of Muslim and Jewish love poetry in medieval Spain: hetero- and homo-erotic love poems written by Muslim and Jewish religious scholars, in which the lover and his sensual experience of the beloved are compared to scriptural characters and storylines. This book examines the ways in which the scriptural referents fit in with, or differ from, the traditional Andalusian poetic conventions. The study then proceeds to compare the scriptural stories and characters as presented in the poems with their scriptural and exegetical sources. This new intertextual analysis reveals that the Jewish and Muslim scholar-poets utilized their sacred literature in their poems of desire as more than poetic ornamentation; in employing Qur'ānic heroes in their secular verses, the Muslim poets presented a justification of profane love and sanctification of erotic human passions. In the Hebrew lust poems, which utilize biblical heroes, we can detect subtle, subversive, and surprisingly placed interpretations of biblical accounts. Moving beyond the concern with literary history to challenge the traditional boundaries between secular and religious poetry, this book provides a new, multidisciplinary, approach to existing materials and will be of interest to students, scholars and researchers of Islamic and Jewish Studies as well as to those with an interest in Hebrew and Arabic poetry of Islamic Spain.

This volume of articles comprises papers from the 25th annual conference of the Poetics and Linguistics Association (PALA), which was held at the University of Huddersfield, England, in July 2005. The theme of the conference was 'Stylistics and Social Cognition', and as usual at a PALA conference, this theme was interpreted very widely by the participants, as the reader of this book will no doubt conclude. At the heart of this volume, there is something of a reaction against the cognitive developments in stylistics, which might be seen as being in danger of privileging the individual interpretation of literature over something more social. The concern is to consider whether there is a more collective approach that could be taken to the meaning of text, and whether recent insights from cognitive stylistics could work with this idea of collectivity to define something we might call 'commonality' of meaning in texts. Stylistics and Social Cognition will be of interest to those working in stylistics and other text-analytic fields such as critical discourse analysis and those concerned with notions of interpretation, collective meaning and human communication.

POEMS FOR THE HEART (Love Poems and Passions III) is a book on poetry, exemplifying human experience that the feeling of love respects no boundary of expression in a heart-to-heart intimacy between two souls. Love is love no matter how long or short its sojourn in the life of a person, no matter how deep or shallow its degree, or no matter how extent or narrow the space it occupies in one's heart. Truly, love is love no matter how it is expressed in different passions: sharing, caring, giving, receiving, laughing, crying, hurting, leaving, pleading, forgiving, or even losing and getting it back again and again. Love never changes its effects and colors: the happiness and contentment in the heart and soul of its beholder.

Painful words, heartbreaking metaphors, hopeful symbols, and love poems are all a part of Singularity's plot progression. The pain of heartbreak was soul-ripping. Feeling trapped in the boundaries of your own mind was like torture. Tears felt like they were endless. Living life just to suffer seemed like God's only purpose for creation. Singularity shows readers that finding faith in God despite the agony of heartbreak can be revolutionary. Experiencing joy in what was otherwise a gray, dull world is made possible through self-exploration, knowledge, and hope in a dark world. Marwah's passion for writing is shown in the depth of her figurative language. She is truly an artist who paints with beautiful words, planting the seeds of imagination in her readers. Readers of Singularity begin to wonder if the misery of this world is inescapable. Can faith really heal the evil that resides deep in the human mind?

POEMS FOR THE HEART Random House Digital, Inc.

A sad thing happens to most people somewhere between preschool and college: we unlearn our natural love of poetry, a love rooted in sound and surprise, pattern and play, discovery and delight. That loss is a tragedy that this book aims to reverse. Based on fifteen years of teaching, and dedicated to the belief that rigor and accessibility are compatible, Listening to Poetry takes nothing for granted, and builds students' confidence and skills from the ground up. It uses innovative, student-centered, and process-based approaches, including practical how-tos and skill-focused exercises for every subject covered. Poems don't have to be approached like riddles to be solved, codes to be cracked, or prisoners to be interrogated. There is a better way, and it starts right here. Don't take our word for it, though. Listen to students who've read this book: "I need to give full appreciation to this book for my new-found love of poetry... I have found myself a new hobby." "Before this book I was overwhelmed by poetry and felt I would never be artistic enough to create or analyze it. Now I feel very comfortable... and am excited to continue my appreciation for the art." "I have found my love for poetry from reading this book. I have learned how to read poetry and how to understand it."

Poetic Conventions as Cognitive Fossils offers a major theoretical statement of where poetic conventions come from.

The work comprises Reuven Tsur's research in cognitive poetics to show how conventional poetic styles originate from cognitive rather than cultural principles. The book contrasts two approaches to cultural conventions in general, and poetic conventions in particular. They include what may be called the "culture-begets-culture" or "influence-hunting" approach, and the "constraints-seeking" or "cognitive-fossils" approach here expounded. The former assumes that one may account for cultural programs by pointing out their roots in earlier cultural phenomena and provide a map of their migrations. The latter assumes that cultural programs originate in cognitive solutions to adaptation problems that have acquired the status of established practice. Both conceptions assume "repeated social transmission," but with very different implications. The former frequently ends in infinite regress; the latter assumes that in the process of repeated social transmission, cultural programs come to take forms which have a good fit to the natural constraints and capacities of the human brain. Tsur extends the principles of this analysis of cognitive origins of poetic form to the writing systems, not only of the Western world, but also to Egyptian hieroglyphs through the evolution of alphabetic writing via old Semitic writing, and Chinese and Japanese writings; to aspects of figuration in medieval and Renaissance love poetry in English and French; to the metaphysical conceit; to theories of poetic translation; to the contemporary theory of metaphor; and to slips of the tongue and the tip-of-the-tongue phenomenon, showing the workings and disruption of psycholinguistic mechanisms. Analysis extends to such varying sources as the formulae of some Mediaeval Hebrew mystic poems, and the ballad 'Edward,' illustrative of extreme 'fossilization' and the constraints of the human brain.

Cognitive Modelling in Language and Discourse across Cultures SBL Press

This is an utterly original and completely beguiling prose novel about a boy who has to write a poem, and then another, and then even more. Soon the little boy is writing about all sorts of things he has not really come to terms with, and astounding things start to happen.
