Global Studies in Education

Otto Kretschmer was only in combat from September 1939 until

March 1941 but was

Germany's highest-scoring U-boat

commander sinking 47

ships totaling 274,333 tons. This definitive work details his personal story and the political backdrop from his earliest days.

Aged 17 he spent 8

months studying literature at Exeter University where he learned to speak

English fluently. The following year, on 1 April 1930, he enlisted as an officer candidate in the

Weimar Republic's small navy. After completing his officer training and time on the training ship Niobe he served aboard the light cruiser Emden. In December 1934 he was transferred to the light cruiser Köln, then in January 1936 made the move to the fledgling U-boat service. His first operational posting was to the 2nd U-Flotilla's Type

VII U35 where he almost being drowned during training in the Baltic Sea!

During the Spanish Civil War, he was involved in several patrols as part of the international nonintervention force. He was finally given command of U23, a post which he held until April 1940. He had already sunk 8 ships including the destroyer HMS Daring

east of Pentland Firth on 18 February 1940. He demonstrated a cool approach to combat: his mantra 'one torpedo for one ship' proved that the best way for his boat to succeed against a convoy was to remain surfaced as much as possible,

penetrating the convoy

and using the boat's high speed and small silhouette to avoid retaliation. His nickname

'Silent Otto' referred to his ability to remain undetected and his reluctance to provide the regular radio reports required by Dönitz: he had guessed that the Allies had broken German codes. Alongside his military skill was a character that remained rooted in the traditions of the Prussian military.

While other U-boat

commanders and crew

returned from patrol with beards and a relaxed demeanor, U99 always returned with all men

clean-shaven and paraded on deck. In the

Bowmanville POW camp

he organized a 2-way radio link to the German

Naval High Command and planned a mass breakout with a U-boat rendezvous arranged. He was also instrumental in the 'Battle of Bowmanville' that lasted for 3 days in October 1942. His antics behind the wire became the inspiration for the

1970 film 'The McKenzie

Break'. Postwar he answered the call for volunteers upon the establishment of the Bundesmarine. He retired from the rank of Flotillenadmiral in 1970.

He suffered a fall

celebrating his 50th wedding anniversary

aboard a boat and died

two days later at the age of 86.

"The World's Highest-Scoring Students: How Their Nations Led Them to Excellence focuses on how various countries transformed their school systems into the world's leading systems of education. The book covers 8 countries: Finland, Singapore, Japan, South Korea, China, Canada, Estonia, and the United States. It offers ideas on improving the United States' school system and includes a plan on how the United States can regain the status it once had as the world's undisputed leader in education. In addition to offering a brief historical context for each country, the book describes important aspects that helped these countries achieve stellar results in international testing, such as their teacher preparation programs, cultural attitudes toward education, and teacher recruitment practices. Although this book is similar to previously published books on this topic, it differs in that it provides detail on the most recent practices various educational systems have used to remain the best performers and the strategies others have implemented to climb to the top. The book offers a new perspective on this topic in several ways. First, it provides a balanced view of the highest-ranking nations in education, offering the outstanding practices they use to achieve stellar results, but also pointing out the problems they endure. It also discusses various controversies about international tests, including the limitations of using these tests to evaluate students"-- make the front page. They make the sports page. On October 7, 1916, nineteen unfortunate souls set off on an ill-fated trip to Atlanta to face the mighty Georgia Tech Yellow Jackets led by legendary coach John Heisman. Set in the burgeoning days of college football riddled with violence and controversy, Cumberland: The True Story of the Highest Scoring Football Game in History is the story of one small law school's date with gridiron infamy. A hundred years later, the game that has been called the Little Bighorn of football is regarded as the blowout of the ages. Many sports fans have heard about the game but this book dives into the unscrupulous world surrounding the game and what took place behind the scenes to make this would-be footnote in history unforgettable.

As more species' genomes are sequenced, computational analysis of these data has become increasingly important. The second, entirely updated edition of this widely praised textbook provides a comprehensive and critical examination of the computational methods needed for analyzing DNA, RNA, and protein data, as well as genomes. The book has been rewritten to make it more accessible to a wider audience, including advanced undergraduate and graduate students. New features include chapter guides and explanatory information panels and glossary terms. New chapters in this second edition cover statistical analysis of sequence alignments, computer programming for bioinformatics, and data management and mining. Practically oriented problems at the ends of chapters enhance the value of the book as a teaching resource. The book also serves as an essential reference for professionals in molecular biology, pharmaceutical, and genome laboratories.

When you hear the phrases "how do you score?", "what is the score?" or "I am going to score tonight" you may automatically think about sports, correct? Well for some of you maybe, however, most people in my audience share that they immediately associate these phrases with trying to score with someone intimately or even sexually. You see it is not surprising that this term triggers such a relation to one specific area. There is no doubt that scoring is also associated with sports; however, its connection is widely used in many more areas of our lives. In addition to the area of relations, this book explores four other key areas where scoring high is vital to the success in fulfilling one's purpose. If you study the content and exercises provided, you will discover how you can achieve the highest score mentally, physically, financially, relationally, and spiritually. These five key areas are important to our being and purpose on earth. In society, we are evaluated, assessed, and even judged by certain scores regarding our individual position in life. Additionally, we are taught the most common areas impacting our levels of success are namely, academics, athletics, and finances. You see, in school we are encouraged to achieve the highest-grade point average or GPA to get the degree which should lead to a fulfilling career. For those who play sports, our scoring predicts our placement in competitions and championships. Financially, the score we strive to achieve the highest in is our credit/FICO score. These are just common areas that one may be familiar with the most; however, scoring high in other key areas are just as important to our success in life. In this book, I will teach you how to score in these five key areas of your life. Let us embrace ourselves as we dig in deep in discovering and implementing ways of scoring high in these five areas.
